Bill Beid's: What kind of goals do you set for yourself as a pitcher?

Bill Lee: A Profile of a Pitcher

Bill Lee: A Profile of a Pitcher (Winnipeg, Britten Films Inc., 1981) is a documentary film about the life and career of baseball player Bill Lee. The film, directed by Bill Reid for Double Bill Films and distributed by Cinema Libre, focuses on Lee's life and career as a pitcher for the Boston Red Sox, as well as his personal life and interests outside of baseball.

In the film, Lee is portrayed as a complex and enigmatic figure, both on and off the field. He is shown as a skilled pitcher with a unique and unconventional approach to the game, as well as a person with a passion for literature, philosophy, and social justice.

The film includes interviews with Lee himself, as well as with other baseball players, coaches, and sports writers. It also features footage of Lee's life and career, including home movies, video clips, and scenes from his baseball games.

Overall, Bill Lee: A Profile of a Pitcher provides a fascinating glimpse into the life of one of baseball's most intriguing figures, and a reminder of the many facets that make up a person's identity.
