corporate support was up from $5,000 to $66,000.

Fisher may have been diplomatic in her exit but others were not. Duke told Cinema Canada, "I saw the shambles Leonard Schein left behind when he ran off to Toronto. I'm busy and I have to look at who I want to spend time with. I'm interested in working with the new group of directors."

Ousted chairman Crawford Hawkins said, apparently in reference to the early days of the Festival, "The days of smoking dope and watching films are over. The raid on the AGM changed the complexion of the Festival; they want to bring it back to a local event because they're the theatre owners," a reference to Schein's demand that all screenings revert to the Ridge, the Hollywood and the Vancouver East Cinema (Fisher had used screens all over the city so that filmgoers in most neighborhoods could see something at their local theatre).

Schein denies any conflict of interest saying he sold all interests in the Ridge and the Hollywood some years ago. His companion Alan Franey is still programmer at the Vancouver East.

Hawkins also told Cinema Canada that he'd already had word that the federal and provincial governments were not interested in funding an essentially local event and that both were displeased by the turn of events at the annual general meeting.

At presstime, it was announced that Alan Franey, former director of the Olympic Film Festival at Calgary and newly elected board member has been appointed interim director of the festival. Businessman Michael Francis and architect Bruno Freschi have been appointed to the board of directors.
